- 373 NASH, Geoffrey. What is Bahai Orientalism? Humanities, 10 i (2021) 15-page article. "Drawing on nineteenth and early twentieth-century European orientalist texts composed either about their own faith, or the Islamic society out of which it grew, the article demonstrates how these led Bahais 'themselves [to]... adopt [...] an essentially Orientalist vision of their own community and of Iranian society'."

Würzburg: Ergon, 2014, (Ex Oriente Lux, 14), pp. 43-55. "This article is about the contest presently going on in Iran between two visions of martyrdom: the first vision is that of the ruling elite, who have turned martyrdom into a political weapon ...; the second is that held by the Bahā'ī community, which maintains a more traditional view of martyrdom."
