L'importance de la tradition indirecte pour l'édition des textes médicaux grecs anciens. Texte et contexte: méthodes et outils de l'édition critique de quelques manuscrits arabes, grecs, italiens et latins. Textes réunis par Irini Tsamadou-Jacoberger et Isavella Stamatidou. Strasbourg: Presses Universitaires de Strasbourg, 2019, pp. 85-95. "[Syriac and Arabic] translations as an indirect tradition of Greek texts are valuable because they often provide us with better lessons than those provided by the Greek manuscripts. In this article, we propose a presentation of specific cases of Galen's treaties in which the Eastern literary tradition is superior to the direct Greek tradition, thus putting the editor in the dilemma of choice between the two."

2158 PIETROBELLI, Antoine. Arabic Περὶ Ἀλυντίας did al-Kindi and Rāzī read Galen? Galen's treatise Περὶ Ἀλυντίας (De indolentia) in context. Ed. Caroline Petit. Leiden & Boston: Brill, 2018, pp. 265-284. Concludes "that Rāzī had read and imitated the Galenic περὶ ἄλυντίας. The formal and thematic coincidences should not be fortuitous from such a connoisseur of Galen like Rāzī. In Al-Kindi's On Dispelling Sorrows, there are no patent traces of any interest for the Galenic περὶ ἄλυντίας neither of a tribute to Galen."
