Leiden & Boston: Brill, 2018, pp. 265-284. Concludes "that Rāzī had read and imitated the Galenic περὶ ἄλυντίας. The formal and thematic coincidences should not be fortuitous from such a connoisseur of Galen like Rāzī. In Al-Kindi's On Dispelling Sorrows, there are no patent traces of any interest for the Galenic περὶ ἄλυντίας neither of a tribute to Galen."

Leiden: Brill, 2019, pp. 227-243. Points out a westward expansion of the "revival of Galen" from eleventh-century Egypt (with Ibn Ridwan) to al-Andalus, "where we find a renewed interest in Galen's works among the Aristotelising philosopher-physicians of the twelfth century, especially Ibn Bajja (d.1139) and Ibn Rushd (1126-98)."
