Orthodox Christians from communities in the Ottoman Balkans who went on pilgrimage to Jerusalem were accorded prominence in their communities as Hajjis on their return home. Ottoman Orthodox Christians themselves termed this pattern of sacred travel as hacılık.

20443 IZMIRLIEVA, Valentina. The title Hajji and the Ottoman vocabulary of pilgrimage. Modern Greek Studies Yearbook, 28-29 (2012-2013) pp. 137-167. Ottoman Orthodox Christians from communities in the Balkans who went on pilgrimage to Jerusalem were accorded prestige and the title of Hajji on their return home. The title was passed on to children as part of the family name. The use of Hajji in this way has nothing to do with Muslims or the pilgrimage to Mecca, but has been transferred to a Christian pilgrimage practice.
