- 279 TILLIER, Mathieu. The Qadis' justice according to papyrological sources (seventh-tenth centuries CE). Legal documents as sources for the history of Muslim societies: studies in honour of Rudolph Peters. Ed. Maaïke van Berkel, Léon Buskens, Petra M. Sijpesteijn. Leiden: Brill, 2017, (Studies in Islamic Law and Society, 42), pp. 39-60. "Literary evidence suggests that under the Umayyads, the qadi's court in Fustat had a weak administrative structure which gradually developed its use of written documents and archival practices. Outside Fustat - and perhaps a major city like Alexandria - it is likely that the qadi's court did not yet exist in Egypt. The situation changes with the early Abbasids. ... The multiplication of references to qadis in subsequent documents ... probably reflects an increase in the production of documents by and for Fustat's court, and could also testify to a reinforcement of the qadi's position."
