written by Ottoman military men themselves, particularly the Silahtar Tarihi by Silahtar Fındıklılı Mehmed Ağa and Mühürdar Hasan Ağa's Cevahir ül-Tevarih. In neither text do the authors directly refer to their views on the art of war."

Frank Castiglione, Ethan Menchinger and Veysel Şimşek. Leiden: Brill, 2020, (Ottoman Empire and its Heritage, 68), pp. 72-100. "... the catalyst for the industrialization along the coastal strip from Yedikule (Seven Towers) to the Çekmece region in the first half of the 19th century was the Azadlı Gunpowder Works. It follows the new scholarship that focuses on the Ottoman transformations from 1768-1839, which laid the groundwork for the Tanzimat reforms."

1073 RIAZ, Rafia: Comparative analysis of Gulzar Ahmed and Richard Gabriel on the military history of the Prophet (peace be on him). Islamic Studies, 55 i-ii (2016) pp. 131-147. "Gulzar Ahmed, being a Muslim Pakistani ex-military officer declared the military campaigns of the Prophet as completely defensive and emphasises on the strict observance of the moral principles throughout the battles. On the other hand, Richard Gabriel, a non-Muslim US ex-military officer not only portrayed Prophet's battles as offensive but declared them as an insurgency and interpreted the war strategies of the Prophet as immoral and inappropriate."
