

1580 SACHEDINA, Abdulaziz. Prudential concealment in Shi'ite Islam: a strategy of survival or a principle? Common Knowledge, 16 ii (2010) pp. 233-246. "The main motivation for prudential concealment seems to have been an eagerness in Shi'ite minorities to identify themselves socially and even in religious practice with majority Sunni communities. However, for those who wished to work for gradual change under unjust and autocratic rule, taqiya functioned as a legitimate, if underground, political activity."
