

A COLLECTION OF TRAVELS,
Thro' various Parts of the WORLD;

But more particularly, thro'

TARTARY, CHINA, TURKEY,
PERSIA, and the EAST-INDIES.

CONTAINING

An accurate and entertaining ACCOUNT of the RELIGION, LAWS, MANNERS, COMMERCE, and CONSTITUTION of many different NATIONS.

Compiled and arranged in Chronological Order,
By Mr. DERRICK.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

V O L. I.

L O N D O N:

Printed for JOHN WILKIE, at the Bible, in St. Paul's Church-Yard: MDCCLXII.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE ROBERT
LORD CLIVE, OF PLASSEY,
In the Kingdom of IRELAND.

MY LORD,

I Have the honour to present you with a collection of very curious travels, most of which were made thro' a part of the world, which must always remember with astonishment and veneration. your lordship's many gallant exploits.

DEDICATION.

mankind, is his sincere wish, who has the happiness to subscribe himself, with due respect,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's

Most obedient,

Humble Servant,

SAMUEL DERRICK.

CHELSEA,
April 27, 1762.

C O N T E N T S

OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

The Travels of WILLIAM DE RUBRU-QUIS, of the Order of Friars-Minors, through Tartary, China, and many Parts of the EAST.

C H A P. I.

A Short account of the author; and the occasion of his journey. His arrival at Soldaia; of the buildings, manner of travelling, carousals, customs, and religion of the Tartars; of their burials; our author's proceedings at the court of Zagaita. He arrives at the court of Sartach. Page 1

C H A P. II.

The surprising rise of Zingis, the first khan of the Tartars, from the degree of a farrier to the rank of a sovereign prince. Of the reception Rubruquis met with from Baatu, he sets out on a visit to Mangu-Khan; of the hardships he sustained on the road; and the various strange nations through which he passed. Of his reception by Mangu-Khan. Of a French goldsmith settled in these parts.

A 4

14
C H A P.

C O N T E N T S.

C H A P. III.

Of various ceremonies used by the Nestorians, Armenians, Saracens, and Idolators; divination by means of a blade bone of mutton; some farther account of Sergius the Armenian monk; of people who skate; of some who are dwarfs; of a curious machine made by the goldsmith. Rubruquis ordered to return homeward; of the recovery of a great lady; of the Tartar ceremony of blessing horses; of the Nestorian manner of celebrating the festival of Easter. 27

C H A P. IV.

Rubruquis engaged in a dispute in defence of his religion; and triumphs. An account of the Scotchfayers, their malice and cruelty. Rubruquis sets out on his return home; he reaches the court of Baatu; where he finds the rest of his people in good health. Of the Aalni. A strange prophecy related by an Armenian bishop. Of the reception Rubruquis met with from the Turkish Sultan; a terrible earthquake; of Rubruquis's arrival in Syria; and the conclusion of his adventures. The story of the old man of the mountain. 38

The curious Travels and manifold Adventures of MARCO POLO, a Venetian gentleman, through great part of Asia, Tartary, and the Islands of the East-Indies, about the year 1269.

C H A P.

CONTENTS.

CHAP. I.

An account of the work; excuses for its defects; Nicolo and Maffeo Polo set out for Constantinople; they proceed to Tartary, and visit the court of the great khan; their different journies backwards and forward, between Venice and Tartary; of Marco Polo's expedition to Tartary; the reception and treatment he met with in that country; his adventures afterwards in Europe; his death and character; his description of Turcomania, the two Armenias, and of the city of Balsora; the state of the Sultan of Balsora; a miracle; Persia described. 56.

CHAP. II.

Balaxiam and Bascia described; of the inchanters, and other curious matters relating to the place last mentioned. Of the base disposition of the people of Cufchar; of the great desert of Lop, and the city of the same name; religious ceremonies of the inhabitants of Sachion in the kingdom of Tanquet; of the prostitution of the women of Camul, and their hospitable reception of strangers; some customs peculiar to the people of Campion. Of the palace and other rarities belonging to Cublai-Khan. That monarch described; a story of him; a description of the great city of Canibalu; of the manner of celebrating the first day of the year, and the anniversary of the khan's birth among the Tartars. Of that monarch's prudence, power and revenues. 70.

CHAP. III.

The people of Cathay, and their religious worship, given an account of; also of the bridge and manufactures.

C O N T E N T S.

factures of Gowza; the province of Thebet described; of the method of defending caravans from the attacks of wild beasts; of the common use of women, and other strange ceremonies of the people of that province; of many countries wherein gold is found in plenty; of prodigious serpents; manner of treating the sick; of the trade of Bengal; of the policy of the Tartarians in battle. 88

C H A P. IV.

The kingdom of Mangi, now called China, described; of the peaceable disposition of the king and people; of the conquest of China, by the great khan of Tartary, in the 13th century; of certain warlike engines, invented by the Polos; the make, number, and strength of the great khan's fleet; of a city one hundred miles in circumference; of its riches and regular government; fine buildings, and plenty of wizzards; also of the religious rites of the inhabitants; of the palace, gardens, and pleasures of the good king Fanfur; of the prodigious populousity and wealth of the kingdom; of a certain curious earth. 100

C H A P. V.

Of Japan; a fruitless attempt made by the khan to conquer that island. The cruelty of his generals punished; of the country of Ziamban. The islands of Java; of the men eaters inhabiting the last mentioned island; the elephant and unicorn described; of iron wood; of the great riches of the island of Ceylon; surprizing ruby in possession of the king of Ceylon; a description of Malabar; rites observed at

C O N T E N T S.

at the interment of the king of that country; of the climate, constitution, and manners of the people; of Coulam, Guzurate, Magaster, and India Minor; of the kingdom of Abascia in India Minor; of the land of obscurity. The conclusion. 112

The Travels of A. G. BUSBEQUIUS, who went into Turkey as Ambassador from the Imperial Court, to SOLYMAN the Magnificent, giving an accurate Account of the Religion, Laws, Manners, Wealth, and Policy of that extensive Empire.

C H A P. I.

The occasion of this embassy; -Busbequius sets out from Vienna; his route thro' Hungary; the Turkish dress described; rude behaviour of the basha of Buda; of the Janizaries; the Turks restricted from drinking wine; behaviour of one who chose to transgress this ordinance; of the ruined state of Hungary; the indolence of the Turks; the funerals and marriages of the people of Servia; of the accommodations for travellers all thro' the Turkish dominions; the manner in which Busbequius travelled; of the people of Bulgaria, and the finery of their women; of the avarice of the Turks; their veneration for scraps of paper; Constantinople and its precincts described.

C O N T E N T S.

C H A P. II.

The ambassador continues his journey to Amasia; the jackall described. Of the Turkish aversion to statues; of the hyæna; Turkish opinion of a resurrection; of the ignorance of the people inhabiting the banks of the river Halys; of the absurd and ridiculous tenets of the monks of Theme Thioi; Busbequius has an audience of Solyman the Magnificent; his court described; an account of a grand entertainment made by Hali Basha for the Persian ambassador; Busbequius returns to Vienna, charged with a commission from the Turkish court; his retinue attacked by the plague; how cured; of the vast fertility of Servia and Hungary; character of the Rascians; a narrow escape from robbers.

140

C H A P. III.

Busbequius returns to Constantinople; his colleagues are permitted to return home; the peace advances but slowly; of Busbequius's house at Constantinople; his ways of diverting himself; two stories of a weazel; one of a serpent; of a she lynx in love with a servant; great affection of a crane for a Spanish soldier; of the tenderness which the Turks have for animals; the vast usefulness of the camel; story of Mahomet the impostor, and a cat; of the Turkish beggars, or rather pilgrims; the value of their slaves; of their women, both wives and concubines; an old woman falls in love with a young virgin; how punished; comical mistake of a hagi at a feast.

153

C H A P.

CONTENTS.

CHAP. IV.

The king of Gholas arrives at Constantinople; the supposed occasion of his coming; of the customs and manners of his subjects; the Turks diffident of the veracity of christian ambassadors; and why; of their exercises; surly behaviour of a Chiau, who guarded the ambassador's house; how revenged; Solyman sets out for Asia; a description of his passing through the streets of Constantinople; they begin to treat Busbequius with more than usual respect; he is invited to the army; an account of the discipline and regularity of the soldiers; of the severity of the Turkish fasts; of their punishments; of the insolence of the Janizaries; how they celebrate the feast of Easter.

169

CHAP. V.

The Turks obtain a signal victory over the Christians; many prisoners brought to Constantinople; Turkish opinion of the impartiality of divine justice; a character of Hali; Busbequius permitted to remove to the island of Principo, to shun the pestilence; an account of the people of the Tauric Chersonese; a specimen of their language; also of the famous land of Cathay; and a character of its inhabitants; of slights performed by a Turkish pilgrim; one of Busbequius's servants suffers for attempting to imitate him; a dispute between two of the ambassador's servants and a cadi, ended in the disgrace of the latter; some prisoners released at the request of Busbequius; he returns home accompanied by a Turkish envoy; a peace concluded upon and ratified.

184

The

CONTENTS.

The entertaining Travels and various Adventures of Capt. JOHN SMYTH.

CHAP. I.

Of captain Smith's birth; he embarks in the honourable Mr. Bertie's service; quits it; ill used by his guardians; turns soldier; is shipwrecked; leads a solitary life in the woods of Lincolnshire; goes abroad; is robbed; flung overboard; saves himself on the island of St. Mary; is taken up by a captain of a ship from St. Malo; assists him in taking a great prize; goes ashore very rich; travels to Rome, and several other parts; serves against the Turks in Hungary; manifests great ingenuity in war; kills three Turkish champions in combat. 197

CHAP. II.

Our adventurer made prisoner by the Turks; sent as a slave to Constantinople; his mistress falls in love with him; sends him to her brother in Tartary; he is used very ill; he kills the barbarian, and escapes with imminent danger into Russia. Some account of the Tartars; he arrives at the province of Transilvania, passes through Germany, &c. comes to Gibraltar; embarks on board a French man of war; Morocco described; some curious anecdotes relating to Mr. Archer, an English merchant, settled here. A description of Congo and Angola; he engages and defeats two Spanish ships of war. 208

CHAP.

CONTENTS.

CHAP. III.

Capt. Smith sails for England; embarks for Virginia; his vast services in that infant colony; is taken prisoner by the Indians; their tricks of conjuration and art magic; in danger of his life; but saved by the king's daughter; is set at liberty; not excusable in his subsequent conduct; imprudence of the planters very injurious to the common good; their errors retrieved by his conduct. 223

CHAP. IV.

Of the perfidy of the Indians, their repeated attempts upon the liberty of captain Smith gallantly defeated; their abject submission; evident treachery. Of some Dutchmen in the English service; Smith is in danger of being drowned by an Indian king of prodigious strength, whom he makes prisoner; he is blown up and cured; designs to assassinate him; his friends send him off to England; miserable state of the colony at his departure; farther account of king Powhatan's daughter; treachery of the Dutch, how punished. Some account of the place. 234

CONTENTS.

A Description of COCHIN CHINA; treating of the Constitution, Laws, Customs, and Religion of that remote Nation. Extracted from the Italian of the Rev. Father CHRISTOPHER BORRI, of the Society of JESUS, who resided there as a missionary, about the year 1620.

CHAP. I.

Of the situation and climate of Cochin China; of the use of the annual inundations; of the vegetable and animal productions of this country; of some of its most valuable commodities; of the elephant and rhinoceros; hunting of the latter.

242

CHAP. II.

Of the complexion, nature, and hospitable disposition of the inhabitants of Cochin China; of their dress, religion, and manners; of their food, beverage, and distinction of rank; of their physicians, and in what manner they prescribe; a remarkable story of a physician of Cochin China; their method of bleeding; their method of curing the scorpion's bite; of their learning and manners; of rewarding military merit; of the punishments allotted here to various crimes; of the justice of the king; his generosity of his land and marine force; impressing men a custom in Cochin China; provision made for their families.

253

Erroneous

C O N T E N T S.

C H A P. III.

Erroneous account of Cochin China published in Spain by a fryar; christianity first introduced here by the jesuits; they are banished and all their profelytes; an accident restores them; the governor of Palucambi very kind to the fathers; his death reduces them to great calamities; of conjuration and various other ceremonies subsequent to his death; their affairs take an unexpected turn; of the idols, temples, and religious worship of the Cochin Chinese; of the intimacy of spirits with these people; a ridiculous story told of one of these spirits by father Borri.

265

The Travels of JOHN BAPTIST TAVERNIER, through Turkey, Persia, and the East-Indies.

C H A P. I.

Of Mr. Tavernier's various adventures, antecedent to his setting out for Persia; he describes the cities of Polia, Scutari, and Tocal; in danger of being stopped by the grand vizir; that minister's melancholy fate; of the church of St. John Chrysoftom; some venturesome Armenians belonging to the caravan, robbed and murdered; Erzerom described; way of preserving the eyes from the drifting snow; of the three famous churches of Armenia; story of a princess flung into a pit full of serpents; of a buffaloe fight; Erivan described.

279

CONTENTS.

CHAP. II.

Of the habitation of Noah after the flood, and the resting place of the ark; of the village of Shambe, where people go mad at eighteen years old; of the manufacture of sbagreen skins; of the vanity of a mollab or monk of Persia; of a certain petrifying water; of pilgrimaging to the tomb of Sha-fafi; of a fight between two bulls called Mahomet and Hally; of the hospitality of the governor; his barbarous death; and why. 290

CHAP. III.

A description of Smyrna. Of the ruins of Ephesus. Civility of the governor of Caramania; the surprising rise of Mahomet Ali beg, the hazar, or master of the king of Persia's household; his great humility; his triumph over the malice of his enemies; a remarkable instance of his justice. 297

CHAP. IV.

Of the most remarkable things to be found on the southern roads, between Constantinople and Ispahan; and of our author's journey through the desert; he arrives at Balsarae; of the swarms of locusts. 308

CHAP. V.

Of the vast hospitality of the inhabitants of Anna; a description of the famous city of Bagdad. Of the cruelty of the Turks at the siege of this place; of the scrupulous nicety of a sect of Mahometan heretics, ticks, called Rafedis; of the funeral ceremonies of the people of Bagdad. Distinction between modest women and courtezans; of a building vulgarly called the tower of Babylon. The city of Balsara described; surrendered by the Turkish governor to Efrusius; his policy. Some account of the Christians of St. John. Several curious particulars relating to these people.

C O N T E N T S.

315

C H A P. VI.

r. Tavernier's account of the islands of Candy, Chios, and other islands in the Archipelago; also of Georgia, Mingrelia, Comania, Circassia, &c. Some curious anecdotes concerning the Circassians.

328

A C O L.